

2009 Legal Services Directory

With 1.9 million civilian workers (including DOD civilians) and 1.4 million uniformed personnel, the federal government is the largest single employer in the United States (Source: White House 2008 budget numbers and OSD). Keeping that workforce informed on pertinent news and information that impacts their careers is critical.

Every day, federal employees struggle with critical workplace issues. They find themselves seeking help to navigate through their rights and the legal issues surrounding:

- ◆ Disputes about compensation and workplace conditions
- ◆ Confusion regarding whistleblower rights
- ◆ Preservation of employee benefits
- ◆ Wrongful termination and other disciplinary issues
- ◆ Section 508 consultations/assistance

In addition, some federal employees face court appearances and/or administrative review panels. Without competent consultation and representation, these situations can seem daunting. Federal employees need a reliable resource to help them locate capable attorneys with extensive knowledge of federal regulations and laws. They seek assistance from experts that understand the intricacies of working with federal agencies. They need advice and help from someone that can answer their questions and defend their claims.
